

AKAMA REPORT 36

There's nothing here yet, and may not be anything further. Since moving ashore permanently, there's not much motivation to go through the log book and extract stories. Suffice it to say that we enjoyed living in and travelling in Australia. We were there for nearly a year.

We left Australia by going north along the east coast, across the bay of Carpentaria to Darwin. In Darwin, we joined a sail boat rally that explored the Lesser Sunda Islands. What we saw and did would fill a book!

From Bali, we headed north, back to Sevana Cove marina in peninsular Malaysia, where we left AKAMA, and put her up for sale, never to return.

Our nomadic adventures were far from over, however. Not knowing where we wanted to live upon our return to Canada, we bought a 39-foot Winnebago motor home and travelled all over Canada and the USA for about five years. Much of that is chronicled on another of our websites.
